

A login window is displayed on application startup. When the user enter any text, it is masked by the OS's default masking character.

If the password entered is incorrect, the system will display a error dialog with a message telling the user that this is the case.

If the password entered is correct then the system will display the main menu window.